Advocates, Dog Lovers Meet at Mountain West Legislative Conference

GR staff, AKC Board Member Chris Sweetwood, Patti Strand, and the CO Federation Board

Dozens of dog owners and breeders descended on Denver, Colorado, last weekend to attend the AKC Mountain West Legislative Conference. The backgrounds, breeds, and states varied, but the attendees had a common goal – to network and learn how to be better advocates for their dogs.

The two-day conference included a broad range of topics to help accomplish these goals. This included presentations by AKC GR staff Sheila Goffe, Vice President of AKC Government Relations, and Director of Legislative Outreach Jennifer Clark, on the tools AKC provides, overviews of recent trends and programs, and tips and ideas on how to be effective advocates. Marcus Bach, Director of AKC Inspections and Investigations, provided information on this important program and what it means for dog breeders, and Dr. Diane Brown, CEO of the AKC Canine Health Foundation, provided an overview of the organization and canine health updates relevant to political advocacy. Sheila Goffe also provided an overview of the new AKC Detection Dog Program and the importance of building support for domestically-bred dogs to protect U.S. citizens.
